MEMORANDUM OF POINTS AND AUTHORITIES

I

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

On January 24, 2008, defendant Crecencio Padilla-Bautista was arraigned on a one-count Indictment charging him with a violation of Title 8, United States Code, Sections 1326(a) and (b). Defendant entered a plea of not guilty.

II

STATEMENT OF FACTS

A. Defendant's Apprehension

On December 26, 2007, Border Patrol Agent A. Reyes was performing line watch duties near Campo, CA, approximately seven miles east of the Tecate, CA Port of Entry. At approximately 11:30 a.m., Agent Reyes observed a group of suspected undocumented aliens traveling northbound approximately 50 yards north of the International Border. Agent Reyes found footprints the group had left and followed the footprints for approximately 15 minutes until he encountered two individuals attempting to conceal themselves in vegetation south of State Route 94. Following a further search, Agent Reyes discovered five additional individuals hiding north of the road.

Agent Reyes conducted field interviews of the seven individuals, including Defendant. In response to the agent's questioning, Defendant admitted to being a citizen of Mexico without any documents allowing him to enter or remain in the United States. Agent Reyes placed all seven individuals under arrest, and they were transported to the Border Patrol processing center in Tecate, CA.

At approximately 4:13 p.m. on December 26, Defendant received Miranda warnings and invoked.

B. Defendant's Immigration History

Defendant is a citizen of Mexico. On December 12, 2007, Defendant was removed from the United States to Mexico pursuant to an Order of an Immigration Judge.

C. Defendant's Criminal History

On August 6, 2007, Defendant was convicted in the Circuit Court of the State of Oregon for Yamhill County of a felony count of attempted sexual abuse in violation of O.R.S. § 161.405 and was sentenced to 13 months imprisonment.

On or about April 15, 2004, Defendant was convicted in Yamhill County Circuit Court of a misdemeanor count of resisting arrest in violation of O.R.S. § 162.315 and was sentenced to seven days jail and 18 months probation.

DEFENDANT'S MOTIONS

A. Motion to Compel Discovery

To date, the Government has provided Defendant with 34 pages of discovery and one DVD. The discovery produced includes the Border Patrol report of Defendant's apprehension, Defendant's rap sheet and documents reflecting Defendant's 2007 criminal conviction and immigration removal. Counsel for the Government has coordinated with defense counsel to schedule a viewing of Defendant's A-File. Defendant has not provided reciprocal discovery.

1. Defendant's Statements

The Government recognizes its obligation under Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure 16(a)(1)(A) and 16(a)(1)(B) to provide Defendant the substance of his oral and written statements. The Government has produced all of Defendant's written statements that are known to the undersigned Assistant U.S. Attorney at this date and all available videotapes. If the Government discovers additional oral or written statements that require disclosure under Rule 16(a)(1)(A) or 16(a)(1)(B), such statements will be provided to Defendant.

The Government has no objection to the preservation of handwritten notes taken by any of the Government's agents and officers. See United States v. Harris, 543 F.2d 1247, 1253 (9th Cir. 1976) (agent must preserve their original notes of interviews of an accused or prospective government witnesses). However, the Government objects to providing Defendant with a copy of any rough notes at this time. Rule 16(a)(1)(A) does not require disclosure of rough notes where the contents of the notes have been accurately reflected in a typewritten report. See United States v. Brown, 303 F.3d 582, 590

(5th Cir. 2002); United States v. Coe, 220 F.3d 573, 583 (7th Cir. 2000) (Rule 16(a)(1)(A) does not require disclosure of an agent's handwritten notes even where there "minor discrepancies" between the notes and a report).

The Government is not required to produce rough notes pursuant to the Jencks Act because the notes do not constitute "statements" as defined by 18 U.S.C. §3500(e) unless the notes: (1) comprise both a substantially verbatim narrative of a witness' assertion; and (2) have been approved or adopted by the witness. United States v. Spencer, 618 F.2d 605, 606-07 (9th Cir. 1980). Any rough notes in this case do not constitute "statements" in accordance with the Jencks Act. See United States v. Ramirez, 954 F.2d 1035, 1038-39 (5th Cir. 1992) (rough notes were not statements under the Jencks Act where notes were scattered and all the information contained in the notes was available in other forms). The notes are not Brady material because they do not present any material exculpatory information or any evidence favorable to Defendant that is material to guilt or punishment. See Brown, 303 F.3d at 595-96 (rough notes were not Brady material because the notes were neither favorable to the defense nor material to defendant's guilt or punishment); United States v. Ramos, 27 F.3d 65, 71 (3d Cir. 1994) (mere speculation that agents' rough notes contained Brady evidence was insufficient). If, during a future evidentiary hearing, certain rough notes become discoverable under Rule 16, the Jencks Act, or Brady, the notes in question will be provided to Defendant.

2. Arrest Reports, Notes and Dispatch Tapes

The United States has provided Defendant with arrest reports. As noted previously, agent rough notes, if any exist, will be preserved, but they will not be produced as part of Rule 16 discovery. If the Government discovers additional reports or tapes that require disclosure under Rule 16(a)(1)(A) or 16(a)(1)(B), this discovery will be provided to Defendant.

3. Brady Material

The Government has complied with its duty under Brady v. Maryland, 373 U.S. 83 (1963) to disclose material exculpatory information or evidence favorable to Defendant when such evidence is material to guilt or punishment and will continue to do so. The Government recognizes that its obligation under Brady covers not only exculpatory evidence, but also evidence that could be used to impeach witnesses who testify on behalf of the United States. See Giglio v. United States, 405 U.S. 150, 154 (1972); United States v. Bagley, 473 U.S. 667, 676-77 (1985). This obligation also extends to evidence that was not requested by the defense. Bagley, 473 U.S. at 682; United States v. Agurs, 427 U.S. 97, 107-10 (1976). "Evidence is material, and must be disclosed (pursuant to Brady), 'if there is a reasonable probability that, had the evidence been disclosed to the defense, the result of the proceeding would have been different.'" Carriger v. Stewart, 132 F.3d 463, 479 (9th Cir. 1997) (emphasis added). The final determination of materiality is based on the "suppressed evidence considered collectively, not item by item." Kyles v. Whitley, 514 U.S. 419, 436-37 (1995).

Brady does not, however, mandate that the Government open all of its files for discovery. See United States v. Henke, 222 F.3d 633, 642-44 (9th Cir. 2000). Under Brady, the United States is not required to provide: (1) neutral, irrelevant, speculative, or inculpatory evidence (see United States v. Smith, 282 F.3d 758, 770 (9th Cir. 2002)); (2) evidence available to the defendant from other sources (see United States v. Bracy, 67 F.3d 1421, 1428-29 (9th Cir. 1995)); (3) evidence that the defendant already possesses (see Rector v. Johnson, 120 F.3d 551, 558 (5th Cir.1997)); or (4) evidence that the undersigned Assistant U.S. Attorney could not reasonably be imputed to have knowledge or control over. See United States v. Hanson, 262 F.3d 1217, 1234-35 (11th Cir. 2001). Brady does not require the United States "to create exculpatory evidence that does not exist," United States v. Sukumolahan, 610 F.2d 685, 687 (9th Cir. 1980), but only requires that the Government "supply a defendant with exculpatory information of which it is aware." United States v. Flores, 540 F.2d 432, 438 (9th Cir. 1976).

4. Any Information that May Result in a Lower Sentence

The Government has provided and will continue to provide Defendant with all Brady material that may result in mitigation of Defendant's sentence. Nevertheless, the Government is not required to provide information bearing on Defendant's sentence until after Defendant's conviction or guilty plea and prior to Defendant's sentencing date. See United States v. Juvenile Male, 864 F.2d 641, 647 (9th Cir. 1988) (no Brady violation occurs "if the evidence is disclosed to the defendant at a time when the disclosure remains in value").

5. Defendant's Prior Record

The Government has already provided Defendant with a copy of his rap sheet and conviction documents in accordance with Federal Rule of Criminal Procedure 16(a)(1)(B). To the extent that the Government determines that there are any additional documents reflecting Defendant's prior criminal record, the Government will provide those to Defendant.

6. Any Proposed 404(b) Evidence

Should the Government seek to introduce any similar act evidence, pursuant to Federal Rule of Evidence 404(b), it will provide Defendant with notice of its proposed use of such evidence and information about such bad acts when the Government files its Trial Memorandum.

Should the Government seek to introduce any evidence of conviction of a crime pursuant to Federal Rule of Evidence 609, it will provide Defendant with notice of its proposed use of such evidence when the Government files its Trial Memorandum.

The Government objects to providing Defendant with complete vehicle and pedestrian crossing reports from the Treasury Enforcement Communications System ("TECS"). TECS reports are not subject to Rule 16(c) because the reports are neither material to the preparation of the defense, nor intended for use by the Government as evidence during its case-in-chief. The TECS reports are not Brady material because the TECS reports do not present any material exculpatory information or any evidence favorable to Defendant that is material to guilt or punishment. If the Government intends to introduce TECS information at trial, discovery of the relevant TECS reports will be made at least by the time of the filing of its trial memorandum.

7. Evidence Seized

The Government has and will continue to comply with Rule 16(a)(1)(C) in allowing Defendant an opportunity, upon reasonable notice, to examine, copy and inspect physical evidence which is within the possession, custody or control of the Government, and which is material to the preparation of Defendant's defense or is intended for use by the Government as evidence in its case-in-chief, or were obtained from or belong to Defendant, including photographs. The Government, however, need not produce rebuttal evidence in advance of trial. United States v. Givens, 767 F.2d 574, 584 (9th Cir. 1984).

8. Preservation of Evidence

The United States will preserve all evidence to which Defendant is entitled pursuant to the relevant discovery rules.

9. Henthorn Material

Pursuant to United States v. Henthorn, 931 F.2d 29 (9th Cir. 1991), and United States v. Cadet, 727 F.2d 1453 (9th Cir. 1984), the Government agrees to review the personnel files of its federal law enforcement witnesses and to "disclose information favorable to the defense that meets the appropriate standard of materiality." Cadet, 727 F.2d at 1467-68. Further, if counsel for the United States is uncertain about the materiality of the information within its possession, the material will be submitted to the Court for in camera inspection and review. In this case, the Government will ask the affected law enforcement agency to conduct the reviews and report their findings to the prosecutor assigned to the case.

10. Tangible Objects

Again, the Government has, and will continue to comply with Rule 16(a)(1)(E) in allowing Defendant an opportunity, upon reasonable notice, to examine, copy and inspect physical evidence which is within the possession, custody or control of the Government, and which is material to the preparation of Defendant's defense or is intended for use by the Government as evidence in its case-in-chief or were obtained from or belong to Defendant, including photographs. As noted above, however, the Government need not produce rebuttal evidence in advance of trial. United States v. Givens, 767 F.2d 574, 584 (9th Cir. 1984).

11. Expert Witnesses

The Government will disclose to Defendant the name, qualifications, and a written summary of testimony of any expert the Government intends to use during its case-in-chief pursuant to Fed. R. Evid. 702, 703, or 705.

12. Evidence of Bias or Motive to Lie

The Government recognizes its obligation under Brady and Giglio to provide material evidence that could be used to impeach Government witnesses, including material information related to bias or motive to lie. The Government is unaware of any evidence indicating that any prospective witness is biased or prejudiced against Defendant. The Government is also unaware of any evidence that any prospective witness has a motive to falsify or distort testimony. The Government will produce any evidence of bias or motive of any of its witnesses of which it becomes aware. An inquiry pursuant to United States v. Henthorn, 931 F.2d 29 (9th Cir. 1991) will also be conducted.

13. Impeachment Evidence

As stated previously, the United States will turn over evidence within its possession which could be used to properly impeach a witness who has been called to testify.

14. Evidence of Criminal Investigation of Any Government Witness

The Government will turn over evidence within its possession which could be used to properly impeach a witness who has been called to testify. Defendant is not entitled to any evidence that a prospective witness is under criminal investigation by federal, state, or local authorities. The Government will, however, provide the conviction record, if any, which could be used to impeach a witness the Government intends to call in its case-in-chief. An inquiry pursuant to United States v. Henthorn, 931 F.2d 29 (9th Cir. 1991) will also be conducted.

15. Evidence Affecting Perception, Recollection, Ability to Communicate, or Veracity

The Government recognizes its obligation under Brady and Giglio to provide material evidence that could be used to impeach Government witnesses including material information related to perception, recollection, ability to communicate, or truth telling. The Government strenuously objects to providing any evidence that a witness has ever used narcotics or other controlled substance, or has ever been an alcoholic because such information is not discoverable under Rule 16, Brady, Giglio, Henthorn, or any other Constitutional or statutory disclosure provision.

16. Witness Addresses

The Government has already provided Defendant with the reports containing the names of the agents involved in the apprehension and interviews of Defendant. A defendant in a non-capital case, however, has no right to discover the identity of prospective Government witnesses prior to trial. See Weatherford v. Busey, 429 U.S. 545, 559 (1977); United States v. Dishner, 974 F.2d 1502, 1522 (9th Cir. 1992) (citing United States v. Steel, 759 F.2d 706, 709 (9th Cir. 1985)).[1] Nevertheless, in its Trial Memorandum, the Government will provide Defendant with a list of all witnesses it intends to call in its case-in-chief, although delivery of such a witness list is not required. See United States v. Discher, 960 F.2d 870 (9th Cir. 1992); United States v. Mills, 810 F.2d 907, 910 (9th Cir. 1987).

While the Government will supply a tentative witness list with its Trial Memorandum, it vigorously objects to providing home addresses. See United States v. Steele, 785 F.2d 743, 750 (9th Cir. 1986); United States v. Sukumolachan, 610 F.2d 685, 688 (9th Cir. 1980); United States v. Conder, 423 F.2d 904, 910 (9th Cir. 1970) (addressing defendant's request for the addresses of actual Government witnesses). A request for the home addresses and telephone numbers of Government witnesses is tantamount to a request for a witness list and, in a non-capital case, there is no legal requirement that the Government supply defendant with a list of the nonexpert witnesses it expects to call at trial. United States v. W.R. Grace, 493 F.3d 1119, 1128 (9th Cir. 2007).

The Government also objects to any request that the United States provide a list of every witness to the crimes charged who will not be called as a United States witness. "There is no statutory basis for granting such broad requests," and a request for the names and addresses of witnesses who will not be called at trial "far exceed[s] the parameters of Rule 16(a)(1)(c)." United States v. Hsin-Yung, 97 F. Supp.2d 24, 36 (D. D.C. 2000) (quoting United States v. Boffa, 513 F. Supp. 444, 502 (D. Del. 1980)). The United States is not required to produce all possible information and evidence regarding any speculative defense claimed by Defendant. Wood v. Bartholomew, 516 U.S. 1, 6-8 (1995) (per curiam) (holding that inadmissible materials that are not likely to lead to the discovery of admissible exculpatory evidence are not subject to disclosure under Brady).

17. Name of Witnesses Favorable to Defendant

The Government will continue to comply with its obligations under Brady and its progeny. At the present time, the Government is not aware of any witnesses who have made an arguably favorable statement concerning Defendant or who could not identify Defendant or who were unsure of [1] Even in a capital case, the defendant is only entitled to receive a list of witnesses three days prior to commencement of trial. 18 U.S.C. § 3432; United States v. Richter, 488 F.2d 170 (9th Cir. 1973) (holding that defendant must make an affirmative showing as to need and reasonableness of such discovery).

Defendant's identity or participation in the crime charged.

18. Statements Relevant to the Defense

The Government will comply with all of its discovery obligations. However, "the prosecution does not have a constitutional duty to disclose every bit of information that might affect the jury's decision; it need only disclose information favorable to the defense that meets the appropriate standard of materiality." Gardner, 611 F.2d at 774-775 (citation omitted).

19. Jencks Act Material

The Government will comply with its obligations pursuant to Brady v. Maryland, 373 U.S. 83 (1963), the Jencks Act, United States v. Henthorn, 931 F.2d 29 (9th Cir. 1991), and Giglio v. United States, 405 U.S. 150 (1972). While the Government is only required to produce all Jencks Act material after the witness testifies, it plans to provide most, if not all, of any Jencks Act material well in advance of trial to avoid any needless delays.

20. Giglio Information

The Government will comply with its obligations pursuant to Brady v. Maryland, 373 U.S. 83 (1963), the Jencks Act, United States v. Henthorn, 931 F.2d 29 (9th Cir. 1991), and Giglio v. United States, 405 U.S. 150 (1972).

21. Agreements Between the Government and Witnesses

If the Government makes or attempts to make any agreements with prospective witnesses for any type of compensation for their cooperation or testimony, it will disclose this information prior to trial.

22. Informants and Cooperating Witnesses

This case does not involve confidential informants . However, if the Government determines that there is a confidential informant whose identity is "relevant and helpful to the defense of an accused, or is essential to a fair determination of a cause," it will disclose that person's identity to the Court for in camera inspection. See Roviaro v. United States, 353 U.S. 53, 60-61 (1957); United States v. Ramirez-Rangel, 103 F.3d 1501, 1505 (9th Cir. 1997).

23. Bias by Informants or Cooperating Witnesses

As noted above, the Government recognizes its obligation under Brady and Giglio to provide material evidence that could be used to impeach Government witnesses, including material information related to bias or motive to lie.

24. Reports of Examinations and Tests

The United States will comply with its obligations under Rule 16(a)(1)(F) with respect to examinations or scientific tests.

25. Residual Request

The Government has complied with Defendant's residual request for prompt compliance with Defendant's discovery requests and will continue to do so.

B. Motion to Dismiss Indictment

Defendant concedes that controlling Ninth Circuit precedent forecloses his arguments. See United States v. Rivera-Sillas, 417 F.3d 1014 (9th Cir. 2005). No further discussion is necessary.

C. Motion to Suppress Statements

1. Defendant's motion fails to comply with Local Criminal Rule 47.1(g).

Local Criminal Rule 47.1(g)(1) provides, in relevant part:

> Criminal motions requiring predicate factual finding shall be supported by declaration(s) . . . . The Court need not grant an evidentiary hearing where either party fails to properly support its motion or opposition.

A District Court may properly deny a request for an evidentiary hearing on a motion to suppress evidence where the defendant does not submit a declaration pursuant to a local rule. United States v. Wardlow, 951 F.2d 1115, 1116 (9th Cir. 1991). See also United States v. Batiste, 868 F.2d 1089, 1093 (9th Cir. 1989) ("[T]he defendant, in his motion to suppress, failed to dispute any material fact in the government's proffer. In these circumstances, the district court was not required to hold an evidentiary hearing."); United States v. Moran-Garcia, 783 F. Supp. 1266, 1274 (S.D. Cal. 1991) (boilerplate motion containing indefinite and unsworn allegations held insufficient to require evidentiary hearing on defendant's motion to suppress statements).

Here, Defendant's election not to submit a declaration is a plain violation of Local Rule 47.1(g). Further, the absence of a declaration prevents this Court from making a finding that disputed issues of fact exist in the first instance. See United States v. Howell, 231 F.3d 616, 620 (9th Cir. 2000) ("An evidentiary hearing on a motion to suppress need be held only when the moving papers allege facts with sufficient definiteness, clarity, and specificity to enable the trial court to conclude that contested issues of fact exist.") (citation omitted). As such, the Court should deny Defendant's motion without an evidentiary hearing. See Batiste, 868 F.2d at 1092 (Government proffer alone is adequate to defeat a motion to suppress where the defense fails to adduce specific and material disputed facts).

A final reason to deny Defendant's request for an evidentiary hearing under 18 U.S.C. § 3501 is the fact that his contentions regarding voluntariness are directed solely at his alleged post-arrest, post-Miranda statements. But Defendant made no post-arrest statements. He received Miranda warnings and promptly invoked. There are no post-arrest statements for Defendant to challenge, and there is no need for an evidentiary hearing.

2. Defendant's Field Admissions Are Admissible

Defendant seeks to suppress his field admissions on the ground that Border Patrol Agent Reyes did not provide him with Miranda warnings prior to asking him limited questions concerning his immigration status. This argument rests on the erroneous premise that Miranda warnings were required in the first instance.

The Fourth Amendment allows officers to perform "brief investigatory stops of persons or vehicles" when "the officer's action is supported by reasonable suspicion to believe that criminal activity may be afoot." United States v. Arvizu, 534 U.S. 266, 273 (2002) (citations omitted); Terry v. Ohio, 392 U.S. 1 (1968). In forming reasonable suspicion, the officer is entitled to draw upon personal experience and specialized training and to make inferences from and deductions about the cumulative information available to him that "might well elude an untrained person." Arvizu, 534 U.S. at 273 (citation omitted). "The process does not deal with hard certainties, but with probabilities" and "commonsense conclusions about human behavior." United States v. Cortez, 449 U.S. 411, 418 (1981). Reasonable suspicion is simply "a particularized and objective basis for suspecting the person stopped of criminal activity." Ornelas v. United States, 517 U.S. 690, 696 (1996) (citation omitted). It is more than a "hunch" and less than "probable cause." Arvizu, 534 U.S. at 274.

Agent Reyes had reasonable suspicion to believe that Defendant had unlawfully entered the United States. While performing linewatch duties approximately seven miles east of the Tecate, CA Port of Entry, Agent Reyes observed a group of individuals proceeding northbound on foot approximately 50 yards north of the International Border. After following the group's footprints, for approximately 15 minutes Agent Reyes encountered a total of seven individuals attempting to conceal themselves on either side of State Route 94. The totality of these circumstances provided Agent Reyes with a "a particularized and objective basis" for suspecting that Defendant was involved in criminal activity. Ornelas, 517 U.S. at 696.

"Given that [Agent Reyes] had reasonable suspicion to make a Terry stop, he could ask [Defendant] questions reasonably related in scope to the justification for their initiation." United States v. Cervantes-Flores, 421 F.3d 825, 830 (9th Cir. 2005) (citation omitted) (upholding admission of pre-Miranda statements made during Terry stop); United States v. Butler, 249 F.3d 1094, 1098 (9th Cir.2001) ("The case books are full of scenarios in which a person is detained by law enforcement officers, is not free to go, but is not 'in custody' for Miranda purposes.").

The Ninth Circuit's decision in Cervantes-Flores is directly on point. There, a Border Patrol agent encountered defendant Cervantes traveling alone in a rural area known for alien smuggling. Cervantes-Flores, 421 F.3d at 829. Cervantes fled, and the agent apprehended him after a foot chase. Id. The agent handcuffed Cervantes and asked him "about his place of birth, his citizenship, whether he had permission to be in the United States and how he had crossed into the United States." Id. at 830. The Court of Appeals upheld the admission of these statements because the agent had reasonable suspicion to make a Terry stop, and the questions "were reasonably limited in scope to determining whether Cervantes had crossed the border illegally." Id. Even the handcuffing did not convert the Terry stop to a custodial arrest given Cervantes' flight and the agent's safety concerns. Id.

Here, the limited questions posed by Agent Reyes concerning Defendant's immigration status were reasonably related to Agent Reyes's suspicion that Defendant had unlawfully entered the United States. Indeed, the questions are indistinguishable from those held permissible in Cervantes-Flores. As such, no Miranda warnings were required, and there is no basis for suppression. Moreover, the fact that Defendant was apprehended in a group of seven individuals underscores that Miranda warnings were unnecessary because it was, in effect, a "public" stop. See United States v. Galindo-Gallegos, 244 F.3d 728, 732 (9th Cir. 2001) (upholding admission of defendant's pre-Miranda statements concerning alienage in § 1326 prosecution - "Where officers apprehend a substantial number of suspects and question them in the open prior to arrest, this is ordinarily a Terry stop, not custodial questioning . . .").

3. Defendant Made No Post-Arrest Statements

Defendant made no post-arrest statements. Rather, as clearly documented in the discovery materials provided to defense counsel, Defendant received Miranda warnings and invoked. The motion to suppress these non-existent statements should be denied as moot.

D. Leave To File Further Motions

The Government does not oppose granting both parties leave to file further motions so long as those motions are based on information not currently available to the parties.

IV

CONCLUSION

For the foregoing reasons, the Government respectfully requests that the Court deny Defendant's motions for discovery, to dismiss the indictment and to suppress statements.
